

FACES OF THE FRONT

The Price Family

Jonathon & Sarah Price and their daughter Lana (along with their dog Lewis!) moved here in 2006, when "Capitol Hill Tower was one of the only buildings around," said Sarah. They have been valued members of the Capitol Riverfront community ever since. The Price family loves seeing the community grow, because "something new is always happening on the Riverfront".

Some of their favorite things about the community are its walkability and the park space. The close proximity to 8th Street; the National Mall, and the ballpark are just a few of the reasons why the Front is a great spot for the young family. The Price family enjoys easy access to the Metro and work, as well as the nearby Botanical Gardens which is a great option for educational entertainment. Their favorite nearby hotspots are Las Placitas, Teds Bulletin, and Cava on Barracks Row.

They appreciate the Capitol Riverfront because they, "developed great relationships with neighbors, especially through our kids," and they "formed a true 'neighborhood' within our condo building, with friends in other buildings and EYA."

The Price Family looks forward to the future of the Front, especially having more restaurants, the completion of Canal Park, the potential reopening of Van Ness Elementary School, and grocery stores.

Sarah added, "It has been a very evident that the BID is committed to this area and we have seen so many changes over the four years we have been here. The green spaces, along with all the summer events, have truly made this feel like a home/neighborhood, and outweighs anything the suburbs has to offer!"
